

Healthcare needed a backbone, so we built it.

Collective Health is not an insurance company. We're a technology company that's fundamentally making health benefits work better for everyone—starting with the 156M+ Americans covered by their employer.

We've created the most configurable, engaging, and insightful employee population health platform in the world, and started a movement that prioritizes the human experience within health benefits. We've built smarter technology that's easy to use, gives people a true advocate in their health journey, and helps employers manage costs. It's a solution that's data-powered and human-empowered.

Our mission is to change the way people experience health benefits by making it effortless to understand, navigate, and pay for healthcare. By reducing the administrative lift of delivering health benefits, providing an intuitive member experience, connecting all the pieces of healthcare, and driving more value, Collective Health guides employees toward healthier lives and companies toward healthier bottom lines.

“

From the beginning of implementation, it was clear that Collective Health wasn't just a vendor. They were going to be a true strategic partner.
